Stennis to train emergency personnel in crash resc

BY DAVID A FARRELL

An air crash rescue school begun recently at the Stennis International Airport has been designated a state fire training scademy, according to Stennis Space Center Fire Chief J.C. Weber.

Emergency personnel from throughout Mississippi will be trained at Stennis to handle air craft accidents and mass air disasters

The three-phase school, which is also an accredited college course, trains emergency personnel on how to handle airport accidents and largescale disasters associated with airports;

The school was conducted at the Hancock County Vo-Tech Center and will be certified through Pearl River Community College and the Federal Aviation Administration. Weber is the instructor.

The course's three phases include basic, advanced and disaster management classes.

Technically known as the "aircraft rescue and fire fighting" course, instruction is being set up on a year-round basis to state firemen because FAA regulations now require that all firemen assigned to airports be certified, said Weber, and go through an annual certification class. The first class is graduating and the second has already begun classes.

Those graduating from the first class were:
Carolyn Zoerner and A. (Beanie) Zoerner of the Bayside Volunteer Fire Dept.; Pete Lacy of Stenmis Space Center's fire dept., Gene Phillips of Stennis airport; and Alan Spence, Deborah L. Sherwin, Timmy Cameron, Thomas Bilbo, Scott

Bilbo, Richard Hass, Charles Pressure les Franzen IV and Bill Calleban, all I teer firemen.

Supervisors raise 911 fees

BY DAVID A. FARRELL

Hancock County supervisors on Wednesday agreed to raise service fees on residential and business monthly telephone bills to help pay for upgrading cock charges are the lowest of

The action came after Sheriff Ronnie Peterson told supervisors the county's 911 computer system is outdated and Han-

Peterson said residents are currently charged 65 cents and businesses $1.57

New rates would see residential charges rise 35 cents to $1 and business rates 43 cents to Supervisors took the action after both Peterson and Hancock County Tax Assessor-Collector Eddie Murtagh said the system was losing money.

Peterson said South Central Bell officials told 911 commission members in a recent meeting the equipment now being used by Hancock County is outdated.

Peterson said Hancock is one of six systems in the state still charging a four percent rate and others have raised rates to pay for the new equipment.

Peterson said Hancock is forced to upgrade, too, since surplus repair parts for the current system, although available right now, will eventually be used up.

In addition, he said 911 expenses will rise because dispatchers are now required by law now to attend the Jackson police training academy.

Said Peterson. "I don't mind telling you, I'm in favor of it, but vou might want to get some input on it," South Central Bell collects the fee on monthly phone bills and then pays the surcharge to the county.

Job market is tight here: Ladner

BY DAVID A. FARRELL

The introduction of the casinos along the Gulf Coast has definitely tightened the job market in Hancock County, said Ann Ladner, manager of the State Employment Service

"In the past, I would send out maybe 20 persons to fill a fast range from fast food positions to food position; now its maybe two or three, and they are usually hired on the spot," said Ladner.

Ladner said Hancock County's unemployment rate has dropped to 6.5 percent, down from 6.8 percent last month, and down almost a full percentage point from 7.4 percent this same time a year ago.

She attributes it to the location of the casinos here.

She said that currently the employment service has 60 job openings. "There is no excuse for someone really wanting a job, not to have one in this job market," she added. She also said that job applications are up by about 1,200 over last year, a reflection of the influx of workers coming to Hancock seeking employment. That, too, she mainly attributes to the building boom generated by the casmos.

the casinos.
She describes the overall situation here as "a healthy job market.'

She said current openings

ment service works with Job. Corps, too, to help train workers for more highly skilled jobs. Job Corps officials are at the amployment service here each Thursday morning. She said some employers are now willing to train people for positions which they earlier insisted on filling with person-security jobs to jobs in the construction industry.

She said there has been a high turnover in the lessskilled, traditional minimum wage jobs caused by workers leaving those jobs and gravitating toward higher paying jobs in the casino industry.

But she said a good byproduct of that is that less employable and low-skilled workers are more in demand. Ladner said that the employ-nel already trained. "That has been caused by the tight job market," she said.

"We just have a limited amount of people to go to the different job openings," she said. Ladner said the employment service here is at 3060 Longfellow Drive, in the new Humane Resources Center. Hours are Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday each week from 8 a.m. to noon, and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Bayou Caddy officials requests county's help

BY DAVID A. FARRELL

Bayou Caddy Casino officials requested approval from the county board of supervisors for various improvements they plan to make in conjunction with construction of a casino Attorney Daniel L. Singletary of the Jackson law firm

Heidelberg & Woodliff, representing the company, outlined proposed changes the casino plans to make: -Removal of guardrails and installation of a curbing system along the seawall to prevent water from splashing onto the road;

-Relocation of Beach Boulevard and Shipyard Road 60 feet west to accommodate casino parking; -Approval to construct parking areas along Fremond

Road and approval to lay a sewer line to the Waveland sewerage treatment plant; and -Abandonment by the county of Beach Boulevard at its intersection with Shipyard Road to its juncture with Bayou Supervisors agreed to the proposals, but board attorney Gerald Gex told developers proper legal procedures would have to be followed on the abandonment of the road. A public hearing on that was set for 10 a.m. on July 19. CASINO-Page 5A

of discomfort

Indicators

What is your comfort index? No, not the net effect of air conditioning, living quarters, food availability, clothes and financial security. Rather, your spiritual comfort index.

Peace by any other name would be just as elusive, just as precious and sought after by every human being. You may want to call it contentment, fulfillment or something else. For the sake of discussion, we'll call

No matter how much we may pursue money, properties, power, prestige, luxuries and fame. in our saner moments we would gladly trade all the above for peace, fulfillment, comfort.

How can you know how close you are to having peace in your mind, in your heart, in your soul, in your life?
Beware if you think you have peace and comfort because you pray often and long, because you meditate devoutly each day, because you never hesitate to assert your faith in God.

Some people say they have peace because they have Jesus, the Prince of Peace, in their hearts. That is wonderful if indeed it is true. But check out the countersigns to make sure Jesus is not just a phrase and formula in your life.

You do have comfort, alias Jesus, in your life if you do the things Jesus did, in addition to saying the things Jesus said and thinking the things Jesus thought.

For instance, if you never fail to acknowledge and greet all the people whom you meet, you are doing what Jesus did, and you have the beginnings of comfort within yourself.

Contrariwise, your comfort level is low if you ignore, neglect or overlook others, not acknowledging them as fellow humans, not making them feel they are worth the time of day.

Yes, your comfort is low whether you are aware of it or not. In other words, there is a lot of discomfort and misery in you if you deny others the basic courtesy, consideration and concern which a fellow traveler must have on earth.

If you do not abuse others physically, sexually or psychologically, there is a strong indication of comfort in you. Even if you have abused yourself or others in the past, forgiving yourself and forgiving others for those episodes of index considerably.

Perhaps unbeknown even to yourself, your comfort index is terrible if it is your delight to gossip about others, to slander others and to assassinate their character. Keep in mind, your discomfort is about your own defects and failures.

You show and prove that discomfort over and over gain whenever you afflict another without cause. Even where there is a justifying cause, affiiction is usually not the answer.

Heat stroke

Avoid a medical emergency with these preventive measures

Excertional heat stroke is the third leading killer of high school athletes in the U.S., but a little common sense is all that's needed to prevent the malady's needless deaths, injuries and illnesses in the dog days of summer.

Heat stroke occurs when the body fails to adjust its metabolisum to the environment. Perspiration can cease and the vic-tim can collapse as the body temperature rises, threatening internal organs and the brain. Athletes aren't the only ones prone to heat stroke, said Dr. Eric Dahl, director and physician-in-charge of the University of Mississippi's Student Health Services. Heat stroke can also fell joggers, sunbathers and workers who spend a lot of time outdoors.

Fortunately, it is totally preventable with a little common sense, which starts with knowing your own limitations and acting accordingly, Dahl said. Even the most physically fit should heed the following —Allow time to become acclimated to the heat. Most people require about two weeks to acclimate their bodies to intense heat. "But, even if your body is acclimated, don't go jogging on a day when the temperature and humidity are high. There's still a significant risk,"

-Avoid rigorous, outdoor activities between 2-4 p.m. "The hottest time of the day is not always around noon, as we used to think," Dahl said. "The hottest time varies, but the hours of 2-4 pm. are typically the worst and should be avoided."

-Drink frequent, small doses of liquids. "If you're not producing about a quart of urine a day, you're probably not drinking enough liquids," Dahl

-Wear light-colored, lose-fitting clothing. Cotton clothing is preferable because it allows the skin to "breathe." Long sleeves also protect the skin from excessive sun exposure.

-Avoid salt tablets. They are "particularly dangerous" on a hot day, Dahl warned.

-Taking medication? Consult a doctor before going out in the sun. This warning especially applies to people taking diuretics, Dahl said. Elderly people, infants, asthmatics and diabetics also tend to overheat quickly.

-Alcohol and sunshine are a dangerous combination. Drinking 'til you drop at the lake or beach can be lethal. "You can pass out in the sun and go into heat stroke before you even wake up," Dahl said.

Toomey said the group is not against the environmental reasons for the law. "We just feel that there has to be some form of a compromise," she said.

"It may be years from now before the county can put in a centralized system," she said. Toomey said the sewage problem is complicating the growth in the county. "If the supervisors want the county to grow, they're going to have to put this in because the growth is now halted in parts of the county," she said; "And the growth of the county is going to demand that something be done.

Toomey said it may be that the county is the only agency that can do anything about the problem.

"People say the supervisors do not want to cause hardships on their constituents, but we're

She said a lot of people that

"We're trying to help everyone because one day this is going to be such a problem that no one will be able to do any-

"We realized that working individually is not getting anything done, but in numbers things sometimes happen," she

State Rep. J.P. Compretta challenged the constitutionality of the bill in April, requesting an opinion of the attorney general.

Compretta asked whether the bill and regulations by the health department cause an effectual "taking" of the property, which would require the state to pay compensation to the owners, and to avoid having to pay compensation it could provide exceptions to the requirements of the Senate bill and health department regulations through legislation.

State Attorney General Mike Moore placed the burden on Hancock County citizens to challenge the onsite wastewater disposal law and the court system to decide on its constitutionality in his opinion.

Compretta and Rep. Harry Frierson introduced a bill during the past legislative session to provide temporary relief from the law, but it was rejected by the Public Health and Welfare Committee.

The bill would have allowed the discharge of wastewater off the owner's property if the discharge met certain conditions. The measure, which was to be applied only to Hancock County, would have been in effect until the county installs a central sewer system in the affected

Compretta said, "I definitely plan to reintroduce the bill in the next session to give relief to property owners in the affected

Compretta said he will be working prior to the session by contacting key legislators, including committee chairman, to discuss this matter with them and work toward passage of the bill.

Compretta said Moore took the easy way out by placing the burden on citizens to test the

"I asked him for an opinion and expected some direction." "The only other alternative I see is to present the bill again this session," he said.

"Hopefully the board of supervisors will move on obtaining some loans and grants," he said.

Mike Ladner, president of the board of supervisors, said the board commissioned engineer Carlos Cordon to put together a study to bring the county up to date on the sewage program.

The board approved sewer line extension work into Clermont Harbor and have applied for a Community Development Block Grant.

Jim Reeves, manager of the Community Development Block Grant Bureau of the Department of Economic and Community Development, said the board of supervisors applied for a grant in May.

"We have received 136 applications and are presently reviewing them," he said.

Reeves said the bureau has to visit all sites and will probably award the grants in late August.
"The state passed the law in regard to the sewerage, and we are trying to comply with it," said Ladner.

He said, "I have no comment in regard to a possible suit against the board.

I was saddened this week by the sudden death of Mrs. Dorothy Hubbard of Waveland.

She was a person I have known all of my life, since I was raised in the neighborhood of her family and relatives. My mother has continued to live in the neighborhood since the mid-1920's.

I also got my start in dealing with the public working for her family's lumber and hardware store. I started as a sophomore in high school, and the business was on what was then Third Street, next to their old sawmill. I worked for Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard for a total of four

I left their employment to join the U.S. Army, as we finished setting up their present location on Nicholson Avenue in a move from Bay St. Louis.

What I learned from them at a tender age has been very valuable to me throughout my life.

Mr. Hubbard, as a politician, prefered to be called a statesman, and in their business, he and Mrs. Hubbard were well known for their honesty and integrity.

Mrs. Hubbard was always active in the business and took a leadership role with the passing of Mr. Hubbard. The traditions continued by Mrs. Hubbard, I am sure, will be continued by their children. As a family, the Hubbards, as long as I can remember, have always been close. The very good memories of Mrs. Hubbard will long be on the minds of her family. Her friends, who were many, including the Waveland Drug Store crew, will also have fond memories of a great lady and citizen of Waveland. It was ever so beautiful Thursday night as the lights along Highway 90 in Bay St. Louis were officially turned on. To see the light increase in brightness along the highway was a sight I have been awaiting for many years.

I was surprised at the number of spectators along the highway as Mayor Eddie Favre, councilmen and members of the Hancock County Board of Supervisors threw the switches along the highway.

There were some motorists who drove the length of the highway just to check the lights.

The lights are very bright. They sort of reminded me of the bus ride I had from the airport in Jordan to town when I visited the Middle East in 1988.

I now hope motorists will keep off the medians and let the highway lights be.

From the Mississippi Economic Council

Playing the government market

IBM, General Motors, Delta Legislature voted to increase Airlines, and even Sears, Roebuck and Company — all giants in their respective industries are cutting back and downsiz-ing due to changing economic conditions.

It's a game of survival for many companies during tough economic times. But more than a game, it's an organized effort to keep the best interest of com-pany stockholders as a top

After losing her job during cutbacks at Sears, Roebuck and Company, one store manager even said, "You realize the com-pany is doing what it needs to do for the stockholders."

American business is looking out for its investors. But where is government during all of these organized efforts to help investors?

In Mississippi, state and local governments are busy adding to their payrolls despite a planned 10 percent reduction by the 1992 Legislature. While increasing the payroll, the taxes for the state.

Even legislation which would have expanded privatization in government was declined in the 1993 legislative session. This legislation would have introduced competition into government, cutting down on spending and eliminating payroll increases.

It's time for state government to pay attention to the needs of its stockholders - the Mississippi shareholders want more effective governmental services without wasteful and ineffective spending. The State should follow the lead of many Mississippi businesses that have responded to changing economic condi-tions, keeping stockholders in mind during downsizing.

It's time for state government to pay attention to the needs of its stockholders — before they sell their shares and invest their money elsewhere.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Abandoned pets face dismal future

Dear Editor. Recently, I have seen many abandoned dogs in the Waveland/Bay area. I am angry and appalled at such neglect,

I believe we have a responsibility to treat our furry friends

I think that if one must "dispose" of his pet, he should use a more humane method other than dropping it off on the streets where the poor thing's chances of starving are high and of its being injured by moving vehicles eminent. Pat Allison

Cochran praises decision to keep Naval Air Station and homeport

U.S. Senator Thad Cochran says he is pleased the Base Closure Commission voted to keep the Meridian Naval Air Station and the Pascagoula Navy homeport open.

"I believe the commission acted wisely, based on the facts concerning the Air Station in Meridian and the Pascagoula Navy Base," the Senator commented.

"Both Meridian and Pascagoula have fought hard and well to convince the commission to keep our base and our homeport open," Cochran said.

"Our state should be very proud of the tremendous job these towns have done to save

"We have always been ready to do our part to defend our country, and we remain a very important part of the nation's defense," Cochran said of Mississippi and the effort to save the bases at Pascagoula and Meridian.

Earlier this month, Cochran testified before the Base Closure Commission in Washington on behalf of both bases.

He joined with colleagues on the Mississippi delegation and with local officials and community leaders in personal visits to Meridian NAS and the Pascagoula homeport to persuade the commission to keep both facilities open.

EYES ON MISSISSIPPI

By Bill Minor

Yankee lawyer Doar helped fight racism

Every June, Mississippi should hold a "John Doar Day," honoring the tall, tousledhaired onetime civil rights attorney for the U.S. Justice Department who 30 years ago saved this state from a monu-mental tragedy of the civil rights era.

It was June 19, 1963, the day of slain civil rights leader Medgar Evers' funeral, that Doar single-handedly averted what most assuredly would have been a massive slaughter of blacks and some white sympathizers in the crowd of some 5.000 mourners who took part in the funeral march.

The day was incredibly hot — 103 degrees — adding to the boiling cauldron of anger and hurt that swirled throughout the black community in the wake of the Evers' assassination.

A surly army of 400 heavily armed policemen, state troopers and sheriffs' deputies nervously fingered their guns as the marchers moved past Capitol Street, Jackson's main business street, and up Farish Street, the narrow "main street" for black folks, to deposit the casket bearing Evers' body at Collins Funeral Home, two blocks above Capitol. From there it would be flown to Washington D.C. and burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

Most of the mourners had departed (one being Dr. Martin Luther King, who had been spirited away by a few friends) at the end of the march to the funeral home. But 500 of the marchers stood firm in the middle of the street, chanting "We want Medgar's killer." Turning towards the phalanx of police arrayed a block away, they vowed to march on to the forbidden Capitol Street.

Dozens of other blacks poured into Farish Street from surrounding houses and side streets. Through the still sultry hot air that hovered over the scene came bricks and bottles, crashing on the pavement at the feet of the bristling line of policemen.

All the ingredients were in place for a bloody showdown as the two groups of humanity one armed only with bottles and rocks, nearly insane with hurt and emotions; the other a trigger-happy army of whites with guns leveled at the mass of black faces — closed towards each other.

Suddenly from the police line, a shirt-sleeved, unarmed John Doar stepped into the no man's land and strode up the middle of the street toward the mob of angry blacks as missiles whistled over his head.

Doar was white, and very few in the ranks of the black horde had any idea who he was. He raised his hands and asked to be heard. "I'm John Doar of the United States Department of Justice. I have come to Mississippi to help you. You can't do anything with bricks and bottles. Go home. . . I know you are angry, but the way is through the courts."

As he pleaded with the blacks to disperse, a half block away sneering officers, their carbines at the ready, shouted at Doar to get out of the way and let them do their job. In those split moments, as I watched the scene, I could visualize if just one gun fired, Farish Street would become a shooting gallery and hundreds of blacks would be gunned down.

But Doar's pleas persuaded the black mob to disband, and the crisis passed. There's no doubt in my mind that Doar saved the day, and the name of Mississippi as well, and no one else around that day could have done it.

John Doar's role in Mississippi didn't end there. His name is etched forever in another later historic event in this state: as the federal prosecutor who convicted eight white men in 1967 for the 1964 slayings of three civil rights workers in Neshoba County

The history of the civil rights movement in Mississippi will record that Doar, the Yankee lawyer who spent six tough years of his life riding the back roads of Mississippi to win black folks their civil rights, was one of the greatest forces for change in this state in that period.

Poetically, in 1973, no longer with the Justice Department, Doar was lured back from his private law practice by the U.S. House of Representatives Judiciary Committee to direct the probe of President Richard Nixon and prepare the impeachment charges against Nixon.

If Nixon had not resigned from office in the meantime, Doar would have again made history as the prosecutor in the impeachment of a president. He's till practicing law in New York City, and helping civil rights causes.

Back in the spring of 1987 when many of us journalists who had covered the civil rights movement in the 60s gathered for a seminar at Ole Miss, John Doar was right htere, honored and respected as a hero to most of us.

And even after 30 years, the memories of what he did that sizzling Saturday in June, 1963 on Jackson's Farish Street come rushing back.

Casino developers also requested permission to construct an elevated walkway to the end of its property line. George Baxter, chief executive officer of Bayou Caddy Casino. Inc., told supervisors plans call for having 40,000 sq. ft. of gaming area in a three-story structure on a barge. # 4th Hancock casino on drawing board

A Nevada casino investment group plans to construct a new gambling complex near the intersection of I-10 and Hwys. 603-43.

That brings casinos either operating, under construction or on the drawing boards to four in southern Hancock County.

The newest one, if built, to be called Mississippi Landing, joins Bayou Caddy Casino, Casino World and Casino Magic, the only one in astual operation.

The Nevada group, operating under a partnership - Mississippi Investment Group (MIG) in a legal notice published in Thursday's The Sea Coast Echo announced their intent to apply for a vessel permit for a casino at I-10 and Hwys. 603-43 at Holly Bluff on Lake Ewelyn in Hancock County.

But a state gaming official said he believes the site will not comply with state gaming laws, which relegates casinos to beaches abutting the Gulf and Bay of St. Louis waters.

The executive director of the Mississippi Gaming Commission, Wilson Carroll, said he believes the commission won't approve the site.

The Nevada group is the second concern to have recently announced plans for a major casino complex in Hancock County. The other was Europa Cruises, which announced it #### had exercised an option to purchase 404.5 acres south of Diamondhead to construct Casino World.

Casino Magic is the only firm actually operating in Hancock County, and Bayou Caddy Casino, Inc., has begun moving dirt at the south end of Beach Boulevard in preparation for construction. The Nevada developers said the casino complex will cost $100 million and will be familyoriented. Plans call for an 85,000-sq.-ft. casing, 17-story hotel, showroom, dinner theater and arcade.

Developers obtained an option to purchase 400 acres at the proposed site.

Partners in the investment group are Glenn W. Schaeffer: Michael S. Ensign, sole shareholder of MSE Investments, Inc.; David R. Belding, sole shareholder of Goldstrike Investments, Inc.; Peter A. Simon II, sole shareholder of Diamond Gold, Inc.; and William A. Richardson, sole shareholder of Last Chance Investments, Inc.

In the legal notice, investors listed their address as Hwy. 93, Goldstrike Casino, Boulder City, Nev. Goldstrike has four Nevada hotel-casinos.

Lawyers representing the group told supervisors on Wednesday construction should start in about six months and be completed by May.

Nature and space conclude summer reading programs

"Wet Mississippi," a program of the Mississippi Museum of Natural Science, will highlight this week's activities for "Camp. Read-A-Lot," the summer read-ing program sponsored by the Hancock County Library System.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration will present a space program on Tuesday, July 6 at 1:30 p.m. at the Kiln Library, and Thursday, July 8 at 10:30 a.m. at the Waveland Library.

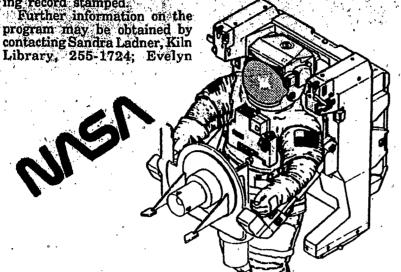

The Wet Mississippi program will be presented at the City-County Library in Bay St. Louis Wednesday, July 7 at 10:30 a.m. Children will learn about the ways water is used in our daily lives and will see characteristic animals that inhabit freshwater habitats.

Children registered in the program are encouraged to complete their four visits to the library, and check out at least six books. To validate each visit, children should have their reading record stamped.

when released by an authorized official under circumstances where there is no obligation placed on VA to exercise custodial restraint or to assure the return of the veteran to custody upon completion of treatment.

Outpatient treatment will not be provided by VA at the penal institution for an applicant serving a sentence.

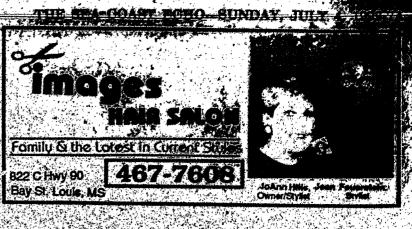

If a veteran is paroled from a penal institution for the purposes of receiving VA staff care, the penal institution will be informed that VA is under no obligation (1) for the custody of or administration of punishment to the veteran, and (2) for the return of the veteran to civil authorities either during or upon completion of treatment. The clinic director or designee will notify the civil authorities when treatment will be completed. Circumstances under which incarcerated veterans may be accepted for treatment in VA facilities are limited.

Assistance by VA medical facilities can be provided to penal authorities or institution agreeable to providing examinations, without reimbursement from VA, to veterans for purposes of entry into the Agent Orange Registry.

Copies of directives, code sheets, etc., will be provided to penal institutions upon requests that the examination results should be returned to the VA medical facility of jurisdiction for inclusion, on the veteran's behalf, in the VA Agent Orange Registry.

Q. How can a veteran get his (or her) fair share from the settlement of the Agent Orange lawsuit?

A. Contact can be made by the address and toll-free phone numbers listed above. Again, this program is not affiliated with VA.

Stennis offers free teacher workshops

The Teacher Resource Center at NASA's John C. Stennis Space Center will offer three workshops for educators during the month of July.

The first two workshops will be July 13 and 14. The "Make and Take Thematic Unit on Space" workshops will show teachers how to use the many aspects of space to motivate children in the areas of mathematics, science, language arts and social studies.

During the workshops, activities and manipulatives designed to enable students to enjoy learning will be constructed and readied for immediate use in the classroom.

The July 13 workshop is open to teachers of kindergarten through third grade, and the July 14 workshop is for teachers of grades 4-6.

An archaeology workshop will be held at the end of July for teachers of all grade levels.

During the workshop, teachers will find out about current efforts to rediscover the old town of Gainesville, Miss., located at Stennis Space Center. This is the first of several possible workshops which will focus on the background research an archaeologist conducts prior to his or her actual field excavations.

The workshops will be held from 8:30 a.m. until 3 p.m. in the Teacher Resource Center. Building 1200, at Stennis. These workshops are free, but reservations are required because of limited space.

In addition, Stennis Space Center's Teacher Resource Cen-

MILITARY MENTIONS

PFC SWEENEY

Marine Pfc. Brad E. Sweeney, a 1991 grāduate of St. Stanislaus High School, recently participated in the 10-day combined military exercise "Team Spirit-93," conducted in the Republic of Korea. Sweeney is with 3rd Maintenance Battalion, 3rd Force Service Support Group, Okinawa, Japan.

Sweeney joined almost 100,000 personnel from all branches of the U.S. military and the Republic of Korea. Fourteen U.S. and 29 South Korean ships took part in this year's exercise. The Team Spirit land, sea and air training exercises have been held periodically since 1978 to improve the defensive readiness of the Republic of Korea. The large-scale operations tested the two nations' ability to work together as they deployed large numbers of troops, equipment and supplies in and around South Korea.

Tips On Writing EFFECTIVE Classified Ads

STICK TO THE PACTS

BE HONEST

Prospective buyers need to know details, like the condition of the item for sale, the size, brand name, color and any other relevant information that would help them make a decision.

Aside from being unethical, exaggerating or misinforming potential buyers won't help you make a sale, and may only serve to lose a prespective buyers' trust. Even if they come to look at what you have to sell, they'll be less likely to buy the item or trust you once they see Abbreviations are not easily understood by many people and may even confuse a reader. # DOWN HOME

By Darlene Underwood Hancock County Mome Economist

Remarriage is a common occurrence in this country. One in every four marriages involves someone who has been married before.

About 60 percent of remarried couples bring children with them to their new marriages. These new families are referred to as reconstituted, step or blended families.

The quality of life is enhanced when a blending of members' expectations, beliefs and values occur; therefore, the term "blended families" is a positive one.

Family members need to understand the rules in the new family as well as the complex array of feelings that may be present.

Stepfamilies must work toward balancing respect for individual needs and creating new common family goals. It is usually destructive (at least degrading) for one adult to require that his or her former lifestyle be adopted as the forder of the day."

This ignores the needs and belittles the feelings of others. A major task of stepfamilies is to develop a feeling of wholeness within the family.

Most blended families confront a staggering variety of feelings and situations. However, these should be met with the expectation that this new family is able to cope with problems and nurture each family member. In all areas of life, we find that performance almost never outstrips expectations.

Parents may be confused by the new roles. Adults may feel caught between loyalties to children and a desire to please the new partner. Given flexibility and patience, a stepparent's Stepfamilies must strike balance within wants, needs of all involved role may change over time.

Establish a good relationship before taking responsibility for discipline. It takes families about three to four years before both parents are seen as authority figures by children.

The stepparent must be sensitive to his or her own needs as well as those of the child. Finding a stepparent role which works is a difficult chore, particularly since the stepchild is seldom able to provide sensitive, positive feedback.

Stepparents, like all parents, often feel unappreciated and used. It is important that the parent consistently try to support the stepparent in this new role. This may mean squalching the urge to take charge.

Families today tend to have less support from family and friends, less time to devote to nurturing children and fewer resources to provide for their children. This situation creates a great deal of stress.

a great deal of stress.

Here are 10 tips for reducing stress in your family:

—Show affection! let all family members know that you love them. Hug them often.

—Build each person's self esteem. Listen to their needs and help them develop their own problem solving skills. Encourage interests and abilities. Respect each family member for his own special qualities.

—Give each person a little undivided attention every day.
—Have weekly or regular family meetings to discuss family activities, routines and problems. Work at problem solving rather than confrontation.

—Talk about any changes or problems that are affecting the family, such as illness, moving, divorce, unemployment or a drug or alcohol problem. Explain how you feel about the situation, and find out how they feel too.

—Use humor and empathy, not orders, anger or sarcasm when asking others to help you.

Examine situations which cause your family members stress, and try to change or avoid these situations. For instance, if your morning routine is stressful, start your preparations the night before.

—Provide a feeling of security for your children by establishing some daily routines, such as a relaxing evening meal together or a bedtime story.

—Exercise regularly or participate in sports. Find activities that can be done as a family. Remember that what is a small problem to you may be a very big problem to someone else in the family.

Proper care ensures beautiful caladiums

By Dr. Milo Burnham Mississippi Cooperative

Extension Service
Caladiums- are among the most popular and colorful plants for pots, flower beds and hanging baskets. These plants do best in light to moderate shade, and for years gardeners have been cautioned not to plant them in deep shade or where they will be exposed to full sun.

In deep shade the brilliant leaf colors fail to develop, and in full sun, the leaves have a tendency to be dwarfed and burn.

Most gardeners are familiar with the varieties Fanny Munson (pink), Candidum (white), White Christmas (white), Pink Beauty (light-pink), Postman Joiner (dark-red), and Freida Hample (light-red).

Hample (light-red).

These varieties have little tolerance to sun, and recommendations are to plant them where they'll receive no more than a couple of hours of morning sun. Afternoon sun is definitely out.

Some new varieties are more telerant of sun than the older, more traditional caladiums. Some of the newer varieties aclude Red Flash (red), Caroline Horton (pink), White Queen (white), Pink Cloud (pink), Aaron (white), and Fire Chief (pink)

George Weathersby, owner of Osborn Flower Co., is a wholesale grower of caladiums. During a recent visit to his greenhouses, I saw more varieties of caladiums than I knew existed.

George said Red Flash is perhaps the best red for full sun. caladiums.

Some of the best strap leaf varieties are White Wings, Lady of Fatima (white), Pink Gem, Red Frill and Pink Symphony.

Because caladiums in hanging baskets are watered more

The leaves of this variety are dark-red in the center splashed with a fuchsia pink with the outer leaf margin being a dark green. White Queen will tolerate about four to five hours of sun. This variety has white leaves with red veins.

Gardeners need to pay special attention to water and fertilizer for caladiums. George said the soil has to remain moist and using an organic mulch is a big help. If the soil gets dry and the caladiums wilt, their rate of growth and production of leaves are slowed.

George said caladiums are easily burned by too much fertilizer. When rates are high, but not high enough to burn, the deaves will have more green and less color. Gardeners need to be careful when fertilizing their caladiums, and those growing in ground beds may require only one or two light applications during the growing season.

Caladiums are popular for hanging baskets, and strap-leaf caladiums are most frequently grown in baskets. The term strap leaf refers to the leaf shape which is narrow and elongated when compared to the more common fancy leaf frequently than those growing in ground beds, they require more frequent fertilization because of the leaching of nutrients with the frequent waterings.

While I found all the different varieties of caladiums at Osborn Flower Co. attractive, there were some that really stood out. Marie Moir looked like the standard white variety Candidum, but splashed with barn red. Miss Muffet has light-greenish white leaves with burgundy splashings.

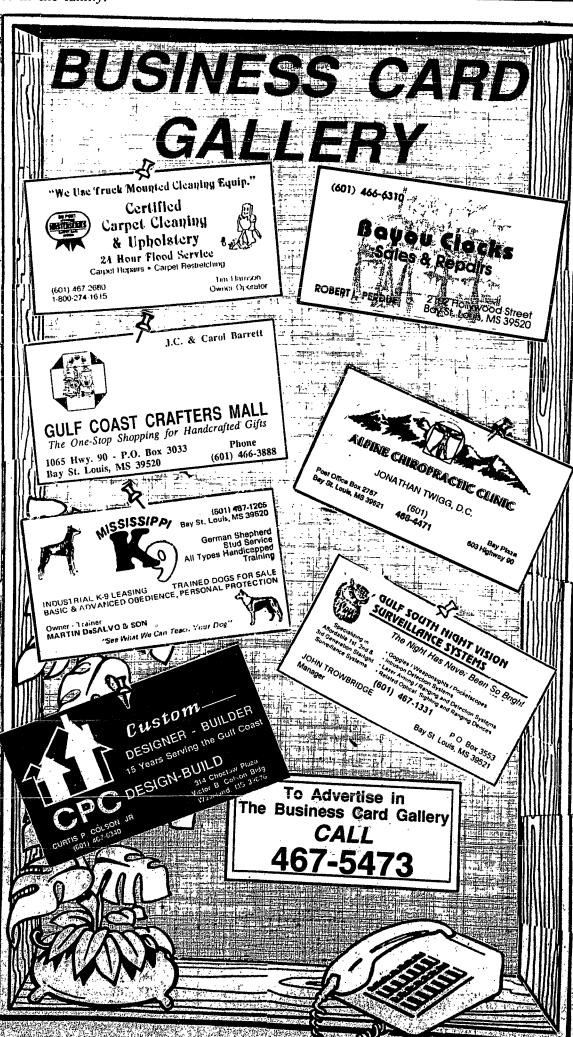

Mrs. Arno Nebrling starts

gundy splashings.

Mrs. Arno Nehrling starts out with green leaves. The next leaves to appear are variegated pink, and the mature leaves are white with red veins. The mixture of colors resulting from the age of the leaves gives an interesting appearance.

Caladiums are tropical in origin, coming from the Amazon Basin, and therefore do well in Mississippi hot summer temperatures providing they have adequate moisture.

It may be surprising to learn that almost all the caladiums grown in the United States every year originate on just 1,500 acres in Florida, the world's center of caladium production.
